

The Ecological Society of America's
Focus on Ecologists Project Presents:

Distinguished Service Citation Award Alan Covich

The Distinguished Citation Award is given annually to recognize long and distinguished service to the Ecological Society of America, to the larger scientific community, and to the larger purpose of ecology in the public welfare

Dr Alan Covich completed his Ph.D. At Yale University. He has researched the impacts of natural disturbances on tropical stream food webs and well as drought impacts on food webs in the Flint River, Georgia. He has worked with colleagues in Puerto Rico on the effects of urban growth, harvesting of freshwater shrimps and crabs, and intersections of road networks on river networks. He has also collaborated with colleagues at the Joseph Jones Ecological research Center on the Flint River and Lake Seminole in southeast Georgia.
